Editorial.

This issue is edited by Miss G. Griffin and R. O. McMurtry.

As far as Arts and Science are concerned, one more year's work at College is rapidly drawing to a close.

The long days, the warm weather, the sloppy streets and the anxious countenances of the students, all warn us that the crucial time is at hand when we shall be weighed in the balance, and, in the case of a great many of us, be found wanting.

It is not stating too much to say that nearly every student is sorry at the closeness of the spring dissolution, for a College life is essentially a social one, and although at times the way may be crooked and the path hard, yet these incidentals are overlooked in after years, and the reminiscences that will remain with us will be those of the good times enjoyed under the sheltering wings of our Alma Mater, and of the many life-long friendships formed in her halls.

In looking over the events of the past year, we see that to McGill has been vouchsafed a large amount of success in her various undertakings. The students seem to have at last realized to some extent their responsibilities in many matters pertaining to themselves, as they never have done in the past, and it is to this increased feeling of interest and enthusiasm that much of our success is due.

Starting with our Annual Athletic Meet in the fall, things commenced to boom. The winning of the Track championship was just the first push in setting the ball rolling. This "rolling" kept on all through the year, absorbing as it went along the Football championship and the Hockey championship of the Inter-collegiate leagues.

But we must be careful not to lay too much stress on one side of the University life. Athletics, although very well in their place, must be kept there and not intruded into other walks of life for which they would be entirely unfitted. We feel, however, that besides doing well in a muscular way, McGill has also grown stronger and better intellectually, and that never before has she such great advantages to offer a conscientious student as she has to-day.

Among certain quarters at College, there is some talk of getting up a large bazaar in aid of the Gymnasium Fund, something after the style of that held in the winter at the Victoria Rifles' Armoury. There is not much doubt but that if McGill students took the matter in hand and succeeded in enlisting the help and support of their many friends among the fair sex, that the affair would be a great success. The only question is whether the game would be worth the candle? Certainly not more than $1,000 of proceeds could be counted on, and the preparations involved to obtain that sum would involve endless worry and difficulty. We mention the matter here, however, so as to enable the students to talk it over.

In another portion of this paper will be found the entire list of student subscribers to the fund for the new McGill Gymnasium. Up to about date $950 have been subscribed, thus leaving a paltry $50 yet to be booked before the collection can be begun. The Athletic committee anticipate no difficulty in raising this amount, and are about to start collecting amongst the students. Every student who has his name down for any amount is earnestly requested to pay up when asked, or before, as one of the surest methods of getting that long-talked-of, much-needed and seemingly fairy structure, a well-equipped and thoroughly up-to-date Gymnasium, is for the students to show their practical sympathy by "digging down" into their own pockets.

In recently noting the honour conferred upon Principal Peterson by the University of Pennsylvania, we made a slight error.

That University was not founded by George Washington; his connection with the institution being simply that he received an LL.D. from it in 1783. The University grew out of other institutions in Philadelphia, being founded by Benjamin Franklin in the year 1740; he held the position of President of the Board of Trustees until 1756.

We regret that the editorial which appeared in last week's OUTLOOK, commenting on the Arts' course at McGill has elicited expressions of disapproval. We are free to admit that the vision of the Undergraduate body, in matters of this kind, is probably less accurate than that of the scholastic forces which conduct the affairs of McGill. It is right, therefore, that certain statements made in our editorial, which have since proved to be unfounded, should be withdrawn. The fact that the subject of the editorial has never been regarded by the OUTLOOK as controversial matter makes us the more willing to give full publicity to what we are informed, by competent authorities, is the true position of affairs.

The statement "that as each succeeding year goes by, less and less attention seems to be paid to the Faculty of Arts" is, it appears, unfounded, and, as proof to the contrary, we are pointed to the facts of the recent improvements in the Arts' curriculum, the addition of an entirely new department, viz:—Economics and Political Science, and the re-organization of the departments of Zoology, Modern Languages and Classics.

It seems also it was incorrect to say that "almost all efforts are devoted to strengthening of Medicine and Applied Science."

We are assured that this is not the case, and that, as regards Applied Science, credit is given to it, by the public, for much which belongs, quite as fully, to its sister Faculty, that of Arts; for instance, in such departments as Physics and Chemistry.

As to the controversy, concerning the non-appointment of graduates of McGill to positions as teachers in Ontario, and the words in the OUTLOOK, "there are good grounds for some of the statements that are being put forth," we are informed that no statements of the nature hinted at were, in fact, made. The words in this case were penned under a misapprehension.

We are also assured, on high authority, that an examination of the matriculation papers in Arts, for the various universities, shows the weight of requirement to be, if anything, in favour of McGill.

The OUTLOOK's editorial was intended merely as a plea for the importance of the Arts' course, and we are therefore glad to learn that Arts is above criticism of the kind set forth. We hope that such may long continue to be the case, and that in the future development of McGill the technical side of the University will never be allowed to overshadow the Faculty of Arts, which we consider to be the true basis of this or any other University.

At last, brighter days and happier seem in store for the McGill OUTLOOK. As they are accustomed to say in the big monthlies, "we hope that we may be pardoned for a little personal mention."

As noted in the editorial of last week, this year was a crucial one for the existence of the College paper. Last year, for some unknown reason, the paper was an entire financial failure and went out of business at the end of the year very much in debt. The question then arose as to whether a College paper could be made to pay at McGill. Some few members of the Undergraduate body felt that it could, and, acting up to their convictions, started the OUTLOOK. Considerable difficulty was experienced at the beginning of the session, but, after any amount of trouble and no little expense, the paper was finally placed in an unassailable position, and it is with a feeling of great pleasure and no little relief that the present Board steps down and out for the session of 1902-03. We heartily wish every success to the incoming Board, and may their success increase out of all proportion to ours.

For the benefit of those of our readers who intend to have their copies of the OUTLOOK bound, and who find some numbers missing from their file, we may say that we still have on hand copies of most of the back numbers of the paper. These may be obtained from the business manager at five cents a copy.

A bound volume of the college paper, containing as it does an account of every event that has occurred at the University during the year, is perhaps the most interesting souvenir that one can possess, and we can strongly recommend our readers to have their numbers of the OUTLOOK bound before leaving College.

Of the fifteen applicants who applied for positions on the OUTLOOK Board for next year, the following five have been elected:—

Miss M. K. McCally, Messrs. F. G. Robinson, Arts '05, J. W. B. Hanington, Med. '05, A. R. Prendergast, Med. '05, F. G. Wickware, Arts '04.

CARELESS SPEECH.

Conversation as a fine art has fallen much into neglect. We seem to be relapsing into a belief that speech is merely a medium of exchange, and that, so long as the meaning is clear, it matters little if the vehicle be crude. But it is a mistake to think that we can use language with slapdash incoherence and convey our thought unimpaired. The relation between thought and expression is so close that one cannot be independent of the other, and this connection is so vital that, when an idea becomes extinct in a language, the word that expressed it withers and falls away, unless the word happens to find employment in expressing a new idea.

Clear thinking is, of course, the first step toward clear speaking, but inaccuracy in the use of language arises less from vagueness of thought than from a carelessness of speech, content to hit somewhere in the neighbourhood, but never piercing the bull's-eye of the thought. A crusade against the stupidity of thought that lies at the root of much stupidity of expression is too hopelessly Quixotic to attempt. There is a fitness about a poor or infirm thought going badly clothed; but there are plenty of people who do think, and yet who express themselves in a manner so stumbling as to distort completely their meaning. Not realizing the beauty and richness of the language that it is open to us, we yet insist on limiting ourselves to a certain class of rough Saxon words, making them do yeoman service, and forcing upon them a mass of work for which they are entirely unfitted, until under this burden they lose even their primitive strength.

An extreme development of the evil of careless speech is the indiscriminate use of extravagant adjectives, so common among school-girls, who, with smiling prodigality, expend the resources of the language upon mental trifles. The injustice to the listener from this inaccuracy of speech is obvious. However, this is slight beside the greater injustice done to the language itself, in which we have only a life interest, and which we must pass on to the generations following us. We have no right to abuse the language we have inherited, for the traces of our rough handling will surely endure.

UNQUENCHED.

(Suggested on reading of the Promethean and other festivals of ancient Greece.)

I think upon the conquering Greek who ran

(Brave was the racer!) that brave race of old—

Swifter than hope his feet that did not tire.

Calmer than love the hand which reached that goal;

A torch it bore, and cherished to the end,

And rescued from the winds the sacred fire.

O life the race! O' heart the racer!
 Hush!
 And listen long enough to learn of him,
 Who sleeps beneath the dust with his desire.
 Go! shame thy coward weariness, and wail,
 Who doubles contest, doubles victory.
 Go! learn to run the race, and carry
 fire.
 O' friend! The lip is brave, the heart is weak.
 Stay near. The runner faints—the
 the torch falls pale;
 Save me the flame that mounteth ever higher.
 Grows it so dark? I lift mine eyes to thine;
 Blazing within them, steadfast, pure and strong,
 Against the wind there fights the eternal fire.

LIFE AT A PREPARATORY SCHOOL IN THE UNITED STATES.

The position which preparatory schools now hold in the educational world and the high excellence which they have attained, both from a point of scholarship and other numberless features, so important in the educational training of the young man of to-day, is great and far-reaching in its results.

The Preparatory School offers advantages to two sets of men:—

First, and perhaps foremost, to the man who has made up his mind to enter college after a course at a preparatory school, that is, to the man who has decided upon a professional career.

The other set of men referred to are those who, for reasons of their own, are not looking forward to a further college course. To these men the preparatory school holds forth all the advantages possible.

The course at a preparatory school is four years in length, embracing in its curriculum all the subjects required for entrance into any college. In addition to this, it offers, in the final year, advanced subjects to any students having completed the course of the first three years in a satisfactory manner.

The dormitory, or residential system, is one of the foremost features of the school equipment, and is a great and important factor in the social enjoyment of the student life.

At 8 p.m. the rooms are on study hours, and from then on all noise is prohibited, and the student is expected to turn his thoughts to the work of the following day.

However, this rule is not of a military nature, and many are the pranks played, and many are the midnight feasts enjoyed without the knowledge of the resident professor. The good sense of the students, however, does not often allow this rule to be abused, and the occasional larks all serve to go hand in hand with the more serious part of the school life.

In the morning the ringing of the chapel bell at 7.15 a.m. brings the student to the realization that the work of the day is about to commence, and after a hurried toilet he rushes to breakfast.

At 7.45 the chapel exercises are held, followed by the first lecture of the day at 8 o'clock. From then until 1 p.m. the time is taken up with lectures.

Two hours of the afternoon are employed with gymnasium work, or practice on the various athletic teams of the school, under the direction of a competent coach and trainer, the remainder of the afternoon being occupied with laboratory work or lectures.

The social life is by no means neglected, and finds expression in the form of the glee clubs, mandolin and guitar clubs, debating societies, etc., while at various times of the school year assemblies and proms. are held in the academy hall or gymnasium, where, amid the college decorations, to the strains of the waltz or two-step, a most enjoyable evening is passed, and one which certainly plays its part in the school life.

All too quickly the student finds the end of the school year approaching, and, in the case of the men of the last two years, it means a season of the hardest work.

The men in the Third Year are preparing to take their preliminary examinations for college, while those of the Senior Year are to complete the final examinations, with the added burden of managing the affairs of commencement week.

The events of commencement are ushered in by the Baccalaureate sermon, delivered to the Senior Class.

On the following evening comes the reception by the Faculty to the Seniors, followed in quick succession by the Senior Hop, and ending with the commencement exercises.

After the long line of black-gowned men have marched slowly out from the chapel doors, to the strains of solemn music, and the cheers for the Class, the school, and a whisper for the class to come has been given, the graduate finds himself face to face with the realization that he is no longer a student, that he has left behind him the pleasant associations formed, and that he is carrying with him only the memories of a most enjoyable and profitable course of a student at a preparatory school.

[This short description of the life at a preparatory school does not do justice to the daily happenings, but only gives a brief outline, without any of the numberless minor details, which, however small, all play a part in the student life.

I have set forth in this description the general life as followed out at Phillip's Exeter, and Phillip's Andover, two of the largest and among the best known of the preparatory schools in the States, but the life in other schools follows very closely along these lines, with possibly a few slight changes.]

MORE ABOUT CHARLIE.

As already recorded in these pages, Charles the First, chief broom-hand-ler-in-waiting to the Dean of Science, is to be superannuated this coming April. Hoping that a few details of his horrible career would be of interest to the thoughtful public, we called at his residence for an interview.

He had just come in from the opera, and was seated before a chafing-dish of mock terrapin and a keg of triple X. After a few draws at his cutty, he informed us that he came of a very old family, but that through a lamentable series of oversights, the genealogy had been lost sight of, "barrin' me an' th' old man;" and when asked if he "had a great grandfather," he replied somewhat warmly, "Of course; wot are yer givin' us?"

However, by reference to the Domesday Book, we find that the respectable family of Charlemagne ap Glanford ap Plantagenet settled in Shoreditch, London, just two and a half weeks before the battle of Hastings. "The Child's History of England" informs us that the cognomen Plantagenet refers to the family crest, "a broom rampant on a floor sullied, supported by a sweeper fatigued."

Coming down to the year 1829, we find Glanford, the father, pushing his way through the world behind a coster-waggon, much to Charlie's regret, who had entertained more ambitious hopes of his only father; so, having first learned to walk, he ran away and enlisted as powder-monkey on one of the East India Co.'s trading vessels; from this position he quickly rose to the top-mast occasionally, and had to stay over night. He once tied a broom to the top-mast in imitation of the famous Dutch admiral, as a defiance to the captain, thus intimating that he would wipe the floor with him.

Leaving India in 1855, he came to Montreal, and, to fill up the time till the Science building should be put up, he acted as assistant to the city engineer, by shovelling snow and breaking stones.

On his 61st birthday the idea struck him that he was getting on to middle age, so he promptly married and settled down, when his practice with the broom enabled him to hold his own in all conjugal disputes.

To record our interview in full would place the OUTLOOK on the Archbishop's list of proscribed books, for this comparatively domesticated old gentleman has, to borrow from Anthony Hope, "been everywhere and done everything which and where a man ought not to be and do"; so we will continue from where we left off.

"No, I 'avn't been drunk, that is drunk, for nigh on twelve years."

"A second Neil Dow," we ventured,

"No, 'e's a total abstensifier; I believes in 'arf-an-'arf. Ow, but I did used to go it! Broke! I remembers a passin' my jack-knife over the counter for one more drink."

"That was rather a case of 'in extremis,' " we remarked airily.

"No, I don't drink that; it was plain bottled, and I remembers it was the last bottle in the case."

"And your last cent; that might be called 'simila similibus,' " we fire-worked.

"No, it was bread an' cheese they gov, not sanniches," he said cautiously, feeling we were getting on dangerous ground.

"You have travelled, Mr. Glandford?"

"Yus, I speaks three langwidges."

"French, music and dancing?" was our suggestion.

"No, English, Lunnon and Hindustani."

"Hindustani your grandmother!" we said politely.

Without a moment's hesitation he began, "Bhaktamala raha bahar suraju burra singh—"

"Call your bluff," we answered, "gallia est omnia adeste fideles."

"Ah, the pot is yourn," he sighed.

"Tell us some yarns about India," we next asked, "What about the missionaries?"

"Never seed one; oh yus! we had just come into Bombay after a long cruise round the cape, and feelin' frisky, we made for the native bazaar, w'en an old chap wearin' a green puggaree and long whiskers, waved 'is humbrella, and yelled, 'Stop my lads! you're a rushin' to destruction!' We collared the old guy and carried 'im along of us. Ow, but 'e was mad!"

With regard to the future, he has no definite plans for publication, but considers himself able to draw his pay with the best.

OUR OWN "ANIMAL FAIR."

"I went to the Animal Fair" is something that has hitherto been faithfully resurrected in a periodical manner for such occasions as theatre night, but now there is a great danger of it becoming prosaic and even having a double meaning. Many to whom the mention of "Animal Fair" brings up former memories of the "monkey he got—" will no doubt be inclined to discredit such news, but such is the case.

Who has not noticed the slow but sure erection of a mysterious little red building near the Medical Faculty, until at the time of writing it stands completed as a model of the architect's skill? Long has the secret been kept, and eagerly has Mr. Cook (who has been appointed guardian), kept hold of the key, but at last the pertinacity of the editors have been rewarded in finding out the real nature of the building; it is in fact going to be a regular animal fair, or, in other words, a miniature zoological garden inside house.

From our old ancestor, the dog-fish, and the slimy frog to the gentle goat, aye, even to the long-suffering monkey (it is said), all will be there. The researches to be carried on inside the edifice will enlighten the world, as well as arouse the neighbourhood, and a supply of dog-fish is going to be laid in that will delight the hearts of all our biological enthusiasts.

It is expected that the caravan containing the vast number of animals to occupy the premises will arrive in a short time, and then in truth our students will be able to look with disdain on other educational establishments and to boast that they possess the finest "Animal Fair" beneath the Union Jack.

LATEST ADDITIONS TO THE MEDICAL LIBRARY.

The Medical Library is still adding to the very interesting books already on the shelf, affording delightful reading for those who have a little leisure time now and then—and we all should have.

The following are the most recent acquisitions:—

The Physician Himself, and what he should add to his scientific requirements in order to secure success. By D. W. Cathell.

Oliver Wendell Holmes said of this book: "It contains a great deal of good sense, well expressed."

Religio Medici. By Sir Thos. Browne, written in 1635.

This is one of Dr. Osler's favourites. Indeed, he has stated it is one of the books that influenced him to take up the profession in which he has become so famous.

It may be interesting to learn that the remains of Sir Thos. Browne were discovered in 1840 in the chancel of the church of St. Peter's, Moncroft, Norwich.

FROM THE COLLEGES.

The R. M. C. Hockey Team, champions of the Intermediate series, have challenged West Point, and expect to be able to arrange a game.

The English Club, at Leland Stanford, have just presented Beaumont and Fletcher's comedy, "The Knight of the Burning Pestle."

President Butler, of Columbia, has offered to receive those students of Cornell who left on account of the typhoid epidemic, till such a time as they may wish to return.

The M. I. T. is seriously considering the question of moving to Brookline, one of the Boston suburbs, in order to secure more room, and to make possible the erection of dormitories.

The Legislature of California has just granted the University of that State $250,000 for a new building to be known as "California Hall." The University has just completed an addition to the library to contain 75,000 more volumes.

It will take a 26 acre lot to provide room for the seven new buildings for Harvard's College of Medicine. The cost will be $2,000,000, half of which has been given by J. Pierpont Morgan. Five of the buildings will be given up to the medical school proper, one to the dental school and one will be used for a power house.

"This is positively the handsomest book that I have met with."—Sidney Ells.

"A treasure box laden with fairest jewels."—Robert Chambers.

"The acme of wit, humour and wisdom, it is the masterpiece of unequalled genii."—Frank Wickware.

The Yale Glee Club has given $900 for a scholarship fund and $1,211 for support of the University crew. Its gross receipts were $15,099.

It is estimated that the business of the Yale branch post-office is already equal to that of a city of 15,000 inhabitants, and steadily increasing.

The Columbia Spectator contains some interesting figures, showing the student earnings during the past autumn. The statement has just been issued by the Committee on Employment of Students. According to data collected by the committee 164 students have earned $14,933.64 from October 1 to December 13, 1902.

PROFESSOR WESLEY MILLS ON THE PROPOSED "UNION."

As I believe that the end of life may be summed up in the attainment of as perfect development as possible of our whole nature, I have for many years hoped that the means to accomplish this by the students of McGill, in a fuller degree than is possible under existing conditions, should be provided.

At the present time much that goes to make up the rounded complete man is almost wholly ignored. Certainly some institution which will provide for social development, for the cultivation of the graces of life, the aesthetic faculty, the ethical indirectly, together with the building up of the physical man, is loudly called for in this and every University which would recognize that man is not pure intellect but a very wonderful complex, so that the question of the best means for his harmonious development is one of the most difficult, as it is to my mind, the most important of all problems.

I hope that whatever particular form the movement that is now engaging attention may take, there will be afforded to every student of McGill, without regard to minor social distinctions, the opportunity to become a man in the broadest and fullest sense of the term.

Dean Walton says:—"Nothing could be of greater service to the University, it would form a centre for student life, and bring together the men of all Faculties. All those who are familiar with the Scotch Universities know that a change has been brought about there by such Unions.

"McGill cannot perhaps afford such splendid quarters as Harvard or Chicago, nor is this at all necessary, but a comfortable and suitable home for such a Union is well within the range of possibilities."

UNION STILL DOING BUSINESS.

During the past week rumours have appeared in the city papers, stating it was probable that the proposed Union would give way to the new Y. M. C. A., and that the money subscribed would be devoted to some other purpose. There is, however, no truth in the report. At a meeting of the graduates, Dr. Colby and Prof. McLeod were appointed to confer with the Y. M. C. A., and look into the question in regard of conflicting interests, but at the conference held last week it was agreed by both parties that the two bodies would not necessarily interfere with each other, and that there is at the University plenty of room for each.

The subscription lists have not yet been opened, as there is a considerable amount of work necessary in organization, but no difficulty is anticipated in raising the required amount.

OPINIONS ON THE UNION.

Dr. Colby, seen in regard to the proposed Union, said that he heartily supported the plan. A Dining-Hall might be better in some respects, and he was anxious to see one established at McGill, but that such a building could not well be undertaken unless there was some definite plan for dormitories in view. A Union would fill a deeply felt want, and was the only thing which did not seem to interfere with any other proposals that were being considered by the authorities. "Perhaps, however," added Dr. Colby, "when graduates find how easy it is to build a Union, they will want put up a Dining-Hall too."

As to endowment, Dr. Colby considered that, if the Union received light and heat, it could support itself.

Prof. McLeod, said:—"In my opinion, a Union is the thing that we want at McGill, to-day. There is nothing else that would take its place. It has been argued that between fraternities and the Y.M.C.A. there is little room for a Union, but I do not think that is the case. At Harvard it has been found that the fraternity men are just the men who support the Union."

AMBITIOUS ATHLETES.

Will Compete for Wicksteed medals.

The Annual competition for the Wicksteed medals will take place at the Gymnasium on Saturday, March 21, and Tuesday, March 24.

The competitors for the silver medal, which is open to members of the Graduating Class only, are A. E. Foreman and Percy Cole, both of Science.

Those competing for the bronze medal, which is given for students of two years' standing in the Gymnasium work, are G. T. Brown, H. A. Chisholm and J. U. Auld, all three Medical students.

The competition will begin at 5 o'clock on both days, and some interesting work may be expected. The Gymnasium will be open to students and visitors.

THE CURLER'S ACCIDENT.

From Scotland itself comes the following story concerning an enthusiastic curler, who invariably wore at the game a cap with comfortable warm ear-flaps. Arriving one day without this headgear, he was greeted by a friend:

"Eh, Wullie, mon, whar's yere auld lug-warmer?"

To which the other replied lugubriously:

"I hae na' worn it seence ma accident."

"Accident? A'm sorry tae hear o't. What was it, then?"

"A mon offered me a dram, an' wi' they dashed flaps I didna hear him."

"Ma conscience!" said the other.

A LAY OF ANCIENT ROME.

Cesar was determined bellum to declare,
Britannos to extinguish, quod erat unfair;
And in a magnum iter vastare near and far,
So imperat aurigae up paret motor car.

Milites paraded, sagittas pointed new,
Emovit deinde rifles, bullets not a few,

Dat his wife an osculum, eripuit his bag,

Hired equum carrumque, ut portaret off the swag.

Transivit then the channel, qua omnes will agree

It is not saluber jactri on the sea.

Caesar est discouraged, wishes for terram

Reclinans o'er the bulwark, exclamavit d—n.

Britanniam attingit, sed upon the shore

Britanni woaded waiting, optantes for his gore,

Per paucos dies mansit, lessuit their grain

Ad naves se recepit and so came back again.

ANNUAL COMING AT LAST—DUE ON THE 20TH, THEY TELL US.

The advent of spring heralds the coming of the "Annual," but the coming of the Annual confirms the advent of spring. It was in 1898 that the McGill Annual made its debut before the students of the University. Since that time 5 succeeding Junior Years have inscribed the records of their courses, in as many succeeding editions of "Old McGill." Before another week will have elapsed the annals of the Class of '04 will have found a place beside those of preceding years; the McGill Annual will have attained its 7th anniversary. In 1898 the "Annual" was looked upon as a book of exclusive interest to the Junior Year, and as such its circulation was largely confined to that Class. To-day, students, irrespective of their Year, are unwilling to be without the Annual, as a result of which it has once more been found necessary to increase the size of the circulation again by another 100 volumes.

However precarious may have been the condition of the Annual at the time of its initial appearance, and however uncertain its status yet to-day its claim to the first place among college publications is admitted to be beyond question.

It is a book for the students, by the students, and of the students, and as such should appeal to all from the embryo Junior in the First Year to the Senior about to graduate.

The "Annual" speaks for itself, and tracing its be all and end all and its great measure of success to the universal and principal sentiment of "Forsitan et olim haec nos meminisse juvavit."

The size of the edition has been increased, the advance sale promises to exceed all previous years, and to ensure getting a copy, it is advisable to order as soon as possible.

To the Freshman it is an opportunity for beginning a series of year books which will contain all that is worth remembering in his College course.

To the Sophomore the book will commend itself as the successor of "Old McGill '04."

To the Junior it is his own particular property.

To the Senior it is the best memento he can carry away to the Laboratory, the mine or the tall timbers.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Mr. H. W. Molson, better known under the pseudonym of "Bert," has gone in for banking, and puts in the major part of his time at a well-known institution on St. James St. His McGill football training will, no doubt, come in handy for trifling with the waste-paper baskets and juggling the ink-bottles after hours.

NO FOOTBALL NEXT YEAR.

R. V. C. students will not take up the game.

It is announced on the highest authority that the Donalds will not form a football club next autumn. When seen by an OUTLOOK reporter, a member of the College, prominent in Athletic circles, said:—The rumour that we are to play football next year is totally unfounded. It is true that football is played in some of the American Ladies' Colleges, but there is at present no intention of introducing it here. It is also very improbable that track athletics will be taken up.

Tennis, hockey, and basket-ball are found to be as much in the way of Athletics as can properly be attended to.

When asked as to the attitude of the girls towards having the R.V.C. turned into a residence for the men, our informer stated something that the reporter was unable to catch, as his attention at the moment was taken up with endeavouring to avoid a collision with the Queen's statue.

A question that is at present agitating many persons, is whether a chair of Dramatic Art, should not be established in connection with the colosseum. There is undoubtedly a great deal of histrionic talent lying dormant amongst the students of the University, especially amongst that portion who reside in the neighbourhood of Union Avenue. That their natural ability should go to waste through lack of educational facilities, is certainly to be deplored, and it is confidently hoped that some generous benefactor will before long win everlasting gratitude from McGill students by providing the opportunities for dramatic education.

"Oh, Mr. Johnson is really too sweet for anything," said airy Lucy, as she turned the pages of "People we Meet," and gazed with rapture upon the clever cartoons.

To keep St. Pathrick's memory green,

AT THE THEATRES.

Academy.—"Hermann the Great" is at the Academy, this week.

Hermann's previous engagements here have been very successful, and his reappearance will no doubt call out a large and fashionable audience. His entertainment is becoming more and more popular with American audiences. His mastery of the English language has become more perfect, and he now accomplishes his feats of sleight of hand with a running fire of wit, which enhances his work from a popular point of view.

Accompanying Hermann are the musical Goolmans, a high-class musical act.

Proctors.—Owing to the performance of "Robert Emmett" at Proctor's Theatre on Tuesday evening, by the Young Irishmen's Literary and Benefit Association, the regular attraction will not begin till the following evening. On Wednesday, for the rest of the week, with matinees on Friday and Saturday, will be presented the "Resurrection," a dramatization of Tolstoi's famous novel.

The play has been much talked of. It is said to be one of the strongest on the stage to-day, and will probably draw full houses.

Francais.—The bill for the week is the melodrama: "The Price of Honor." Here is the result of an effort by the advance agent:—"A play with true heart interest, intense emotional scenes, wholesome comedy moments and thrilling climaxes should succeed, and such has been the happy experience of 'The Price of Honor.' The author conceived a well defined plot and it is unravelled in a logical and satisfactory manner. Personages new to stage lore are introduced, and throughout the entire performance there is a distinct note of novelty. The company appearing in "The Price of Honor," is an organization of tried players, whose every effort is an artistic accomplishment." Surely we cannot miss them!

The attraction for the week of March 23 is "Shore Acres," which will be seen for the first time at popular prices.

ARTS.

1903.

We remember having heard a tale once of a man who had forgotten his name asking to be looked up in the Directory. Some of us who take Geology are wondering these days, if the animals of which we have been hearing lately really did know their own names, or did they carry a copy of our friend Scott around with them when they went to the printer's to have their calling cards engraved—and, by the way, those same cards must have been longer than broad. And yet in two or three weeks we shall be expected to remember these miserable creatures' names. There is only one thought to comfort us, that in a couple of million years students of the most advanced Geology will be spending their grey matter over such names as Parkins, Troop and Dutand, and wondering exactly why they chose such names.

We should like to express our pleasure at the recovery of Mr. Simister from a long and severe illness. He is perhaps looking a little thinner, but we fancy he is not much the worse for his troubles.

THE BIOGRAPHIES OF ARTS

F. H. W. Bovey, Montreal.

Wilfred drifted into this great Class when we were in our Second Year. We have not the records of his early life in our possession, but we can easily believe that "he lisped in Latin, for the Latin came," to quote Pope. It is his great ambition to know as much classics as Professor Carter, and, if he isn't careful, he may, some day. Meanwhile, he looks on life with a scowl and tries to teach the Undergraduate Society how to do business.

Dakers, Cameron, Montreal.

The subject of this sketch is a broad-faced, happy-looking individual, who spends his time in inventing new names for philosophical ideas and in trying to decry Kipling as an author. He bears a marked resemblance, we are told, to the Dean of our Faculty, and has proved himself an honest man in the handling of the finances of the Arts' Society. He doesn't talk much, except to his friends—and thus forms a marked contrast to—.

Gui C. Couture, Montreal.

Gui C. is a wonderful man. If you ask us in what way, we are at a loss to proceed, but, nevertheless, it has been borne in upon us that Gui C. is a wonderful man. He early distinguished himself by the original attitude he assumed in our Freshman group photo. We hope that he intends to stand up to his graduating picture like a man. We are sure that that picture will one day be worth a small fortune to its happy possessor, when Gui C. has become a second Sir Wilfred Laurier.

Alan C. Dunlop, Montreal.

Oh! what a subject here for artist's brush and biographer's pen. But we are unequal to the task, and so will execute the discretion-better-part-of-valour act, and leave the consideration of the aesthetic qualities of our hero to other and more tutored hands. We only venture to remark upon the light and easy way in which Alan sees fit to look out upon life, and we believe that he has, at last, solved the long vexed question of how little work a man can do and yet remain a member of Arts, 1903.

Gustave Dutaud, St. Blaise, Que.

Gustave is chiefly noted for his aversion to the French critics, his love of notoriety, and his passion—we can think of no other word—his passion for Browning. To see him sitting in the library with a copy of that great poet, and a cyclopædia professing to let one into the dark places before him, is indeed a sight to make even strong men weep. Gustave is thinking of writing a cyclopædia of his own to cover the study of Browning, and it promises to be more complete than all its many predecessors. Our friend already sees the path to fame before him, and we wish him all success in following it.

James E. Fee, Stanstead.

The subject of these remarks is a well-built, impressive individual with a happy enough looking face, but with an inward tendency toward philosophy, and a serious view of life. We could imagine him acting the part of Hamlet and delivering that grand soliloquy on the fear of death (Mark Twain's version preferred), with an eloquence and fervour and fellow-feeling for the royal dame which could not fail to carry an audience into raptures of sympathy.

George D. Fripp, Ottawa.

This bright and shining representative of the capital, graduated from the Collegiate Institute there, and is not one of the least of the 'mighty army of contributions which that school has given to the world of science and letters. Although not the tallest man in 1903, he, nevertheless, looks down on things in general in as happy-go-lucky a way as if he were. When not engaged in the deep researches in the realm of political science and kindred arts studies, he spends much of his off-time in the dissecting room of our sister Faculty, with the avowed purpose of discovering the exact amount of damage done the human frame, alive or otherwise, by the deadly cigarette.

Alan Dale Harris, Ottawa.

This cheerful is generally distinguished by being in a hurry. Just how much good his hurry does him is open to question, but we gather it is a supposedly necessary factor in a journalistic life, and Alan is our journalist. Ever since the moment when his delightful "Wild Animals" and "Who's Who" appeared upon the literary market, his success has been assured. In minuteness of biographical knowledge he comes a close second to his fellow townsman, Mr. Morgan. Add to the above-mentioned volumes a brilliant year as editor of the great MCGILL OUTLOOK, and we have little cause for wonder at the rumour that Mr. James S. Bennet has opened negotiations with this young man of genius with a view to making him editor of the New York Herald the moment he graduates—a moment which we presume is not far off.

William L. Holman, Charlottetown.

All wise men come from the East, Willie comes from the East, therefore—but we hesitate to finish the syllogism. After spending his boyhood fishing for cod and the other things in the blue waters of Northumberland Strait, he came West to cast his line in the pond of learning furnished by the McGill Calendar, and not in vain, let us hope. He has already attained considerable repute as a biologist, and is a general favourite by reason of his pleasant smile and kindly heart.

Walter S. Johnson, Montreal.

Walter has gained an international reputation as a successful and much-sought-for office-holder. He has held positions of trust in nearly every organization connected with the Faculty of Arts, and has actually refused many others. Walter's strong point, we understand, is his knowledge of all the masterpieces of English literature, from Alfred the Great down to the Duchess. He is also a strong orator, and is one of the brilliant quartette who have moved among us as Presidents of the Year, and is likely to take a high place in the days to come among the scholars of the land.

Gerhard R. Lomer, Montreal.

This is one of the men who work. When the time comes for him to graduate, we hardly know how the Library will get along without his familiar face, as he sits at the end of one particular table with a stock of books, principally philosophical and humorous, piled high in front of him, and almost obscuring his classic brow, and every now and then glancing over them in an exceedingly attractive direction. He is also well known as a literary critic, he and Mr. Cameron having many a warm falling out concerning certain men in the world of letters, whom one admires and the other despises.

Despite the earnest endeavours of the Reporter, the Class poet escaped from his padded cell the other day while we were engaged in trying to find the meaning of one of Prof. —'s lectures. He left behind the following, which we publish in hopes that it may lead to his identification and recapture:—

TO MR. R-B-N-W-TZ.

Oh mighty orator, in happy time,
Sent to St. Lawrence' shores,
From where, 'mid lands of sunny
western clime
The golden Fraser roars.
Prosperous may thy homeward journey be.
And, when thou shalt arrive,
Behold! with how great zeal I wish,
ami,
That thou and thine may thrive;
For I would wish that in some hidden glen,
Unknown to mortal eye,
A mine of gold, unfound by human ken,
Thy lucky hap may spy.
That thus', by fortune favoured, thy good chance,
So pleasant may appear,
That thou shalt stay there, nor thy tongue entrance
Again my 'wilderer ear.

A marginal note of our poet's makes some confused statement to the effect that "entrance" is ironical. What this mean we leave to the judgment of our readers.

1906.

The Class was rather disturbed in English lecture the other day, and has not yet recovered. Allison came into the room with a small spot of mud on his clothes and one hair out of place.

It is contemplated taking up a collection to buy a razor, some soap, and a strop for the three inseparables, L., N., P. We promise L. a lawnmower.

We are glad to note that Drew and Pease have recovered from their recent illnesses—Drew from the measles, and Pease from something known only to himself.

Crocker is going to buy a tin of maple syrup. Bear it in mind, boys; we'll pay him a visit to help him along with his Latin.

Barclay desires us to state that he has been confined to bed with the toothache, but that he will be well enough to take a trip to Europe this summer.

Mundie will pass the summer visiting friends in China and Borneo.

Housser has received an appointment on a committee to enquire into the evils of walking with ladies along Sherbrooke Street on Sunday afternoons. While we congratulate Housser on his appointment, we would express it as our opinion that Housser is eminently qualified for the position.

R. V. C.

It is just about now we begin to wonder why we were ever rash enough to come to college—the awful place where they are cruel enough to give examinations. Between muddy streets and these terrible ordeals looming up before us, we wonder whether, after all, life is worth living. Were is not for the stores of good advice we had lately from the retiring Seniors, we should never be able to worry along, it is sure.

Professors even are beginning to look careworn over the difficulties of settling dates. Why doesn't everybody want the same thing? It is so hard to have arranged a beautiful schedule all to suit oneself, and then to find that just because some inconsiderate student happens to be unable to be in two places at once, or to write on two papers at the same time, it has to all be changed.

As if the Juniors had't worries enough, certain members of the Year have been guilty of conduct which seems absolutely criminal, and has justly called forth the disapproval and censure of their friends (if they have any). They have handed in their theses—and there are two more weeks before the end of the term. Atrocious! What right have they to do such a thing while the rest are still struggling under the burden of "from five to ten thousand words?" Should such crime be allowed to go unpunished? But probably their own consciences will punish them sufficiently. They would, if they were properly constituted, certainly.

Subscriptions these days appear to be very much in order. Every girl in '04 seems to be collecting money for a different purpose. We almost fear to issue from the privacy of our own homes lest we be accosted by some one with a demand for "that dollar for —," anything from violets for the errand boy to hair pins used at the Arts'-Science Dance. There is, of course, nothing like being used to a thing. We might, now that we are so confirmed in the habit of paying out our last cent with cheerful resignation, almost be willing to pay $5.25 extra for having our pictures in the Annual done over. But even with all our practice, that is a height to which we do not quite soar as yet. We may be lacking in ambition, but after the sad defeats we have been suffering this year in our persistent efforts to encourage College Athletics, how can we be expected to have much ambition left?

By the way, the Annual will be out sometime (we suppose). It is well to be prepared for the shock when it comes, and this will mean more subscriptions to be paid up—happy, happy thought.

1906.

Everything in the way of frivolity is over—everything except examinations, and they are pretty much here at present. 1906 is alive and well, but the smiles that bedeck our faces will probably have changed into grins of resignation after April 9. But Freshies always look on the bright side of things, and intend to buck up and show what they can really do.

There are a few things in this world which cannot be explained. Here are some:—

Youthful Freshie,
Electric Plates,
Flash in the Lab.
Golden Gates—but some things cannot be explained.

Hockey Trophy,
Freshies Try,
Of course they win,
I wonder why—but some things
cannot be explained.

Exams. are coming,
Freshies grind,
Results out,
Left behind—but some things
cannot be explained.

Anticipation,
Turpitation,
Participation,
Don't care-ation—but some things cannot be explained.

Will the ladies of the English class kindly not "string out" in the back of the room.

Suggestions to College papers.
"Little Willie's" rather stale,
Can't you find another tale?
Long ago was Willie six,
And we're about tired of all his tricks.

DELTA SIGMA.

The Annual Business Meeting of the Delta Sigma Society was held on March 9. Miss Taber's report reviewed the work of the year. There are fifty members of the Society this year, and the average attendance has been twenty-seven. The annual lecture was delivered before the Society by Professor Moyse. Miss Derrick and Miss Cameron also gave lectures. There have been a series of inter-class debates, resulting in a victory for 1906. The Society is much indebted

SCIENCE.

Congratulations to Profs. Owens and Herdt, on their new Channel Detector. It must be a good thing, since Mr. Prefontaine says so.

Friend Curly only hopes the "Students' Union" project won't interfere with his pet Gymnasium scheme. It is rather sudden to jump on the graduates for two buildings at once; but they are a noble breed.

We would distinctly warn you fellows against building on that remark about taking books into the Design Exam. The lecturer said, "as far as I am concerned, I have no objection." This is a slightly different matter to getting the books past a lot of obstinate exam. proctors, and besides there is a little poem pasted on the desks, reading something like "No books or papers..... under pain of instant electrification." Verb, sap., gentlemen.

Notice to Betting Men.—Anybody willing to give big odds on Hockey matches, ring up long John. He always bites. Eh, Mike!

Prof. (calling roll)—"Gn-d-nger?"

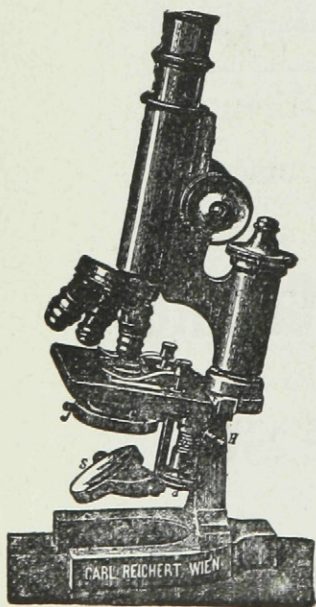

Voice from the gods—"Coming!"

Prof. (laughing)—It's his turn this morning, is it?

It is a good plan to take the future into account in all matters. For example, those class night-caps of 1906 are tolerable on a Freshman, but on a Sophomore they will be impertinent, on a Junior, fearful and wonderful, and on a Senior, positively indecent.

The other day while rooting through E-ls' desk among plans of the Ottawa River mud-flats, and cribbed mechanical drawings, we pulled out a neat little volume bound in half-turtle, bearing the label—"1001 gems from the poets." "What the Scarlet Sheol is this for?" we asked.

of his oil-polished voice,—“That, Huh! Fine thing. Ugh! Cultivates intellect. Humph! Broadens mental horizon. Grunt, Grunt.”

This sounded so fishy, coming from Syd, that we at once remembered that he is writing a book about us all, called “The Annual,” wherein we shall be vilified with all manner of poetic quotations starting with the old English style:—

“Eftsoones a rounde fatte oilie manne of Godde was he,” and concluding with the ravings of Strenyard Rudling:—

“He’s a murky brahmin lobster,
On a sceabrous jamboree.”

MEDICINE.

1906.

WORK! WORK! WORK!

It is to be hoped that out of the fifty-seven men going up for the “Sup.” in Biology, a larger proportion than at the Xmas Exams will be successful. It will be too bad if any have to enter on the harder work of the Second Year with their Biology still to be passed.

The genial Dr. Mills is making himself deservedly popular by the bright and harmless stories with which he beguiles the time allotted to First Year Physiology lectures.

First Year Meds. take great interest in watching the playful antics of "Fat Jack" McDonald, the perpetual Second Year anatomist. No doubt we will have the pleasure (?) next year of again seeing him do his boyish "stunts" in the dissecting-room.

—The "Medical Press and Circular," London Eng.

The Royal Military College.

THERE are few national institutions of more value and interest to the country than the Royal Military College at Kingston. At the same time its object and the work it is accomplishing are not sufficiently understood by the general public.

The College is a Government Institution, designed primarily for the purpose of giving the highest technical instructions in all branches of military science to cadets and officers of Canadian Militia. In fact, it is intended to take the place in Canada of the English Woolwich and Sandhurst and the American West Point.

The Commandant and military instructors are all officers on the active list of the Imperial army, lent for the purpose, and in addition there is a complete staff of professors for the civil subjects which form such a large proportion of the College course.

Whilst the College is organized on a strictly military basis the cadets receive in addition to their military studies a thoroughly practical, scientific and sound training in all subjects that are essential to a high and general modern education.

The course in mathematics is very complete and a thorough grounding is given in the subjects of Civil Engineering, Civil and Hydrographic Surveying, Physics, Chemistry, French and English.

The object of the College course is thus to give the cadets a training which shall thoroughly equip them for either a military or civil career.

The strict discipline maintained at the College is one of the most valuable features of the system. As a result of it young men acquire habits of obedience and self-control and consequently of self-reliance and command, as well as experience in controlling and handling their fellows.

In addition, the constant practice of gymnastics, drills and outdoor exercises of all kinds, ensures good health and fine physical condition.

An experienced medical officer is in attendance at the College daily.

Five commissions in the Imperial regular army are annually awarded as prizes to the cadets.

The length of course is three years, in three terms of 9 months' residence each.

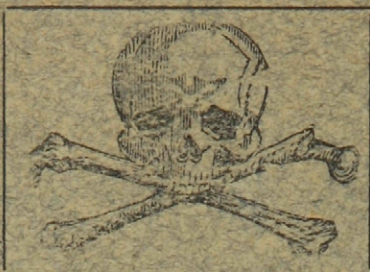

The total cost of the three years' course, including board, uniforms, instructional material, and all extras, is from $750 to $800.

The annual competitive examination for admission to the College will take place at the headquarters of the several military districts in which candidates reside, in May of each year.

For full particulars of this examination or for any other information, application should be made as soon as possible to the Adjutant General of Militia, Ottawa, Ont.
